

Megan Kendrick Interior Designer

Growing up with geologists as parents, Megan moved frequently throughout her life allowing her to experience many different places and cultures. With this exposure, both within the US and internationally, Megan gained an appreciation for the power and importance of well designed infrastructure in which we live and work within. She feels that merging exterior and interior design is an important step in creating the best end product, and is especially passionate about bringing the best design solutions to Denver’s growing population.
