

Jay Ireland Architect

Jay serves the studio in a unique and critical way, focusing 100% of his time collaborating with the team to solve critical details, map the work ahead, and provide QA/QC at every milestone of the project. His experience spans decades, proving him the patience and knowledge to tackle the most complicated project types, but also to train our architects to become self-sufficient and resourceful, no matter the challenge. Jay guides our projects from beginning to end as a resource to the entire A/E team.

As the son of a high school architectural drafting teacher, Jay found his passion for architecture from an early age, and thus began a lifelong pursuit of architecture. His passion for architecture has manifested into a love for urban mixed-use projects due to the unique challenges of marrying multiple uses into a single building, and enhancing the public experience by integrating these projects into the city fabric. Jay has worked on many different project types in Denver and throughout Colorado.
